

Coming out

coming out is a natural process the reason that it seems so difficult for most of us, is because of the whole straight identified role playing trip that has become so ingrained within us since the day we were born or making love with women if you want to or making love with you brothers if you want to Coming out is a process that happens in stages First you have to find out that you're gay another thing that increases frustration and much confusion is lots of us don't come out until we're in our twenties or even later, but if you think back on it you can probably think of lots of times you've been turned on by the idea of gay sex Most "straight" women and men are sexually attracted to people of the same sex as often as gay women and men are It just gets ignored or suppressed or passed off as "I really dig her head " or " What a far out cat" the fact that many of us try to rush it. we try to be rather than just being gay naturally take it easy! don't rush it, but don't suppress it either play it by ear, because we'll gain a much clearer sense of our own reaction and identity if we do i am a woman i love being a woman i love my sisters because they are women Our strength is our unity We should always reinforce our force by openly loving each other

coming out does not mean turning into a screaming queen and relating sexually only to other males coming out means being free enough about your sexuality to be a screaming queen if you want to

it is difficult though it is frightening and confusing not because openly loving each other is "unnatural" but because illusions have been inflicted upon us from the day we were born that is a long time as the illusions fall away, so will the fear and confusion fall away gradually and be replaced by openly loving each other

i really don't need to be the one to say this will happen so i will carry on up the stream with my mind always held before me in the clearing reality of shattered illusions and fallen dreams. my only hope is, while i carry on you and other people will come out with me-into the golden sunlight with our hands so warm and our hearts forever glowing

So many closets tell me, "Wow, i could really dig on it and i've been thinking about it lately " But then follows the story of the dirty old man who came on to them in a sexist way when they were 14 or something like that as my shattered illusions fall into dust i come with you into the golden sunlight my hair is flowing and so is my mind amid the crystal clear stream of being real and fallen dreams

Let's face it, almost all of us have had such an experience in our past your hands are very warm and your heart is flowing now, maybe the tomorrows will glow and you will be so rich and sober with the age of ripened youth

So what? What does that have to do with now?
